1849	23 November	Louth, LIN	in magistrates court charged with robbery at the fair	Friday last being the annual Martinmas Fair of this borough, the number of visitors was unusually large...Several of the light-fingered gentry appeared in the early part of the day, but were speedily hunted out by the police : we do not hear of their having been successful except in the instance of a poor silly old fellow from Humberston, who was enticed into a stable by a female of the tribe, who, after a good deal of amorous language, speedily eased his pockets of a purse containing 4*l.* 15*s.*, and, as he sorrowfully expressed it, "vanished at once,"... [...] On Friday the 23d inst., at Louth...Charles Matthews, licensed hawker, was charged by Robert Parker, labourer, of Humberston, with being concerned with another man and woman in stealing from his person a purse containing 4*l.* 15*s.* : committed for two months as a rogue and vagabond.	The Lincolnshire Chronicle, 30 November 1849, 5

				A night out, which had a fatal termination, was described at an inquiry held by Henry White, Esq., County Coroner, on Monday, into the circumstanceas of the death of Job Matthews, aged 51, who was found dead in a ditch by the roadside on Saturday morning. The deceased was a member of a well-known family of van dwellers encamped on land at Hollywater, and had for some time past been employed upon the new range at Longmoor. He was married and leaves nine children. The inquest was held at the Prince of Wales, Mr. Jesse Smith was the foreman, and P.S. Clark acted as Coroner's officer. Mrs. Linda Matthews state that the deceased was her husband, aged 51. He was a labourer employed on the range, and she last saw him at 6.30 a.m. on Friday morning, when he left for work. He always enjoyed the best of health, but she admitted was sometimes addicted to drink. James Ray, a labourer, stated that the deceased and himself were working together on the range at Longmoor. They left off work on Fiday at about 2.30 owing to the bad weather. It was snowing and sleeting. They went to the pay office, and each drew £1 7s. They went down the road to the Queen public house, but it was not open so they stayed until six o'clock, the opening hour. The Coroner : A pretty long time to wait. The witness said they were not paid until five o'clock. He went on to say that they stopped at the Queen until 7.30 or 8.0 p.m., or possibly a little longer. The Coroner : What did you have? – Witness : Pints of beer. The Coroner : How many? – Witness : I couldn't say ; we had several. He (witness) said he himself only had beer, but he could not say what the deceased drank. Each paid for his own. They left for the Woolmer. They were not told to do so. They stayed at the Woolmer until 9 p.m., closing time. The Coroner : What did you have there? – Witness : The same as before, beer ; several pints. I cannot say how much. The deceased, witness added, had beer. The Coroner : When you left you both of you had had enough? – Witness : perhaps so, sir ; at any rate I could walk home. I suppose we did have enough. The Coroner : I should think so. How much money did you have? – Witness : about three and twenty shillings. I spent about three shillings all in beer. I suppose the deceased spent about as much. Witness went on to say that they started to walk home together. Deceased, who had a job to get along, said to him as they reached the Woolmer Pond ; "Go along, Jim, my brother-in-law, I'l catch you presently." Witness then walked on and left him. He did not see him again alive. The deceased was on his feet, and did not lay down in the road while witness was with him. He was able to walk. It was a bad night. The deceased did not complain. The Coroner : You have families at home? - Witness : Yes, sir. I have twelve, the youngest of whom is seven. I believe the deceased has about the same. The Coroner : Although this is not a court of morality, to have a pint of beer after you have done work there is no harm in it, but it is disgraceful to go into these public-houses and spend all the evening drinking when you ought to be at home with your wife. This should be a warning to you. Besides, I think you ought not to have left him ; apparently the man could not stand. Sidney Price, a temporary postman, living at Blackmoor, said he saw the last witness with the deceased in the Woolmer at about 8.30 p.m. on Friday. The men appeared to be fairly sober at that time. He did not speak to them, and at any rate he did not notice they were the worse for drink. He could not say what the men had to drink. They left just in front of witness, about five minutes before closing time. Witness saw the men afterwards ; they were about two hundred yards past the Woolmer Pond. They were singing but they were not staggering. They had got hold of one another. Pte. James Graham, 8th (S) Battalion King's Own Scottish Borderers, stated that on Jan. 25th he was on fatigue duty as a stretcher bearer, and was proceeding to Longmoor Camp early in the morning, when he found the deceased lying in a ditch on the side of the main road. His legs were in the water and his head was on the bank. P.C. Dunscombe stated that the last witness reported the matter to him, and on proceeding to the spot found the body of deceased lying in the ditch as mentioned by the last witness. He was quite dead. Witness searched the clothes and found £1. 5s. 4d. in money and an old knife. There were eight inches of water in the ditch, and the deceased was lying on his back when found. Dr. Crowther Smith said he had made a post-mortem examination. The cause of death was exposure accelerated by the condition of the organs, which were all in an unhealthy state. The deceased had obviously been a drinker, by the condition of the organs, and there was also evidence of signs of pleurisy. The stomach was so dilated that the deceased had evidently had a good deal of liquor to drink before death, and this might also have accelerated death. Although the man was a man of good physique any little thing might have carried him off. The Coroner : A man who should have taken things in moderation. In summing up, Mr. White observed that it was a sad and in some ways a rather disgusting case. However, as he had said, that was no court of morality. The jury returned a verdict of death from drink and exposure accelerated by the unhealthy condition of the organs.

1915	25 January	Whitehill, SRY	inquest held	LABOURER'S DEATH FROM EXPOSURE. FOUND IN A DITCH NEAR WOOLMER POND. A night out, which had a fatal termination, was described at an inquiry held by Henry White, Esq., County Coroner, on Monday, into the circumstanceas of the death of Job Matthews, aged 51, who was found dead in a ditch by the roadside on Saturday morning. The deceased was a member of a well-known family of van dwellers encamped on land at Hollywater, and had for some time past been employed upon the	The Hampshire Advertiser and Basingstoke News, 30 January 1915, 3

				new range at Longmoor. He was married and leaves nine children. The inquest was held at the Prince of Wales, Mr. Jesse Smith was the foreman, and P.S. Clark acted as Coroner's officer. Mrs. Linda Matthews state that the deceased was her husband, aged 51. He was a labourer employed on the range, and she last saw him at 6.30 a.m. on Friday morning, when he left for work. He always enjoyed the best of health, but she admitted was sometimes addicted to drink. James Ray, a labourer, stated that the deceased and himself were working together on the range at Longmoor. They left off work on Fiday at about 2.30 owing to the bad weather. It was snowing and sleeting. They went to the pay office, and each drew £1 7s. They went down the road to the Queen public house, but it was not open so they stayed until six o'clock, the opening hour. The Coroner : A pretty long time to wait. The witness said they were not paid until five o'clock. He went on to say that they stopped at the Queen until 7.30 or 8.0 p.m., or possibly a little longer. The Coroner : What did you have? – Witness : Pints of beer. The Coroner : How many? – Witness : I couldn't say ; we had several. He (witness) said he himself only had beer, but he could not say what the deceased drank. Each paid for his own. They left for the Woolmer. They were not told to do so. They stayed at the Woolmer until 9 p.m., closing time. The Coroner : What did you have there? – Witness : The same as before, beer ; several pints. I cannot say how much. The deceased, witness added, had beer. The Coroner : When you left you both of you had had enough? – Witness : perhaps so, sir ; at any rate I could walk home. I suppose we did have enough. The Coroner : I should think so. How much money did you have? – Witness : about three and twenty shillings. I spent about three shillings all in beer. I suppose the deceased spent about as much. Witness went on to say that they started to walk home together. Deceased, who had a job to get along, said to him as they reached the Woolmer Pond ; "Go along, Jim, my brother-in-law, I'l catch you presently." Witness then walked on and left him. He did not see him again alive. The deceased was on his feet, and did not lay down in the road while witness was with him. He was able to walk. It was a bad night. The deceased did not complain. The Coroner : You have families at home? - Witness : Yes, sir. I have twelve, the youngest of whom is seven. I believe the deceased has about the same. The Coroner : Although this is not a court of morality, to have a pint of beer after you have done work there is no harm in it, but it is disgraceful to go into these public-houses and spend all the evening drinking when you ought to be at home with your wife. This should be a warning to you. Besides, I think you ought not to have left him ; apparently the man could not stand. Sidney Price, a temporary postman, living at Blackmoor, said he saw the last witness with the deceased in the Woolmer at about 8.30 p.m. on Friday. The men appeared to be fairly sober at that time. He did not speak to them, and at any rate he did not notice they were the worse for drink. He could not say what the men had to drink. They left just in front of witness, about five minutes before closing time. Witness saw the men afterwards ; they were about two hundred yards past the Woolmer Pond. They were singing but they were not staggering. They had got hold of one another. Pte. James Graham, 8th (S) Battalion King's Own Scottish Borderers, stated that on Jan. 25th he was on fatigue duty as a stretcher bearer, and was proceeding to Longmoor Camp early in the morning, when he found the deceased lying in a ditch on the side of the main road. His legs were in the water and his head was on the bank. P.C. Dunscombe stated that the last witness reported the matter to him, and on proceeding to the spot found the body of deceased lying in the ditch as mentioned by the last witness. He was quite dead. Witness searched the clothes and found £1. 5s. 4d. in money and an old knife. There were eight inches of water in the ditch, and the deceased was lying on his back when found. Dr. Crowther Smith said he had made a post-mortem examination. The cause of death was exposure accelerated by the condition of the organs, which were all in an unhealthy state. The deceased had obviously been a drinker, by the condition of the organs, and there was also evidence of signs of pleurisy. The stomach was so dilated that the deceased had evidently had a good deal of liquor to drink before death, and this might also have accelerated death. Although the man was a man of good physique any little thing might have carried him off. The Coroner : A man who should have taken things in moderation. In summing up, Mr. White observed that it was a sad and in some ways a rather disgusting case. However, as he had said, that was no court of morality. The jury returned a verdict of death from drink and exposure accelerated by the unhealthy condition of the organs.
