ALLEN, Martha

1830	mid-March	London	in magistrates court	UNION-HALL - An old woman, of the gipsy tribe, named Martha Allen, was charged with obtaining money from a young female, under pretence of telling her fortune. Betsy Shelly, a girl 17 years of age, stated she was in the service of a coffee-shop-keeper, in Prospect-row, whose wife was in the habit of having her fortune told by the defendant. Anxious to know whether she should soon procure a husband, she one day called upon the prisoner, at her house in Three Cups-alley, and gave her some money, which she obtained upon pledging her earrings. The prisoner then told her that two men - a dark one and a fair one - were desperately in love with her ; that the dark one would use every effort to get her into his power, but that the fair one would become her husband. The prisoner then gave her a paper, which she said contained American seeds, and desired her to put it into her bosom at night, and she would be caressed by the man she loved. These directions were complied with ; but, said the complainant, I never saw or dreamed of the dark man or the fair one. In a week after she again visited the prisoner, and received from her a quantity of red powder, which she was desired to sprinkle upon nine pieces of paper cut in the shape of hearts. This she was to do in her bed-room, and then blow out the candle; when the prisoner assured her that the man who was to be her husband would walk into the room and embrace her tenderly in his arms. "Don't be alarmed," she added. "when you see him, but welcome him." At night the girl cut out the nine hearts, but she said. "just as I was in the act of spreading the red powder upon the first heart, I heard a loud thump at the door, the flame of the candle burnt blue, and the house shook as if it had been threatened by an earthquake." Mr. HONE - Well, What did you do next, when the house shook about your ears in the way you have described? Complainant - What did I do, Sir. Why I jumped into bed as quickly as I could, and covering my head over with the blankets, lay there afraid to pop it up, in case I should see or hear any thing. Mr. Holt - Then you did not put the experiment to the test? Complainant - No, Sir ; for, in my hurry to get into bed, I upset all the red powder. The Magistrate committed the prisoner to the House of Correction for fourteen days, to hard labour. The old woman said she had the rheumatism so bad, that it was impossible she could go on the wheel.	The Courier , 22 March 1830, 4

1869	October	St. Ives, CAM	in magistrates court	John Allen, of Newark, a gipsey, was brought up in custody, charged with stealing from the person of Miles Pestle, horse dealer, a gold watch and chain, of the value of £20, on the night on Monday. From the evidence it seemed the prosecutor went into the Fountain Inn, and had a glass of ale, and being tired, fell asleep in a chair, and in a room where there was a number of persons. He was awoke by some one pulling at his chain, and he saw the prisoner, who immediately bolted with both articles. He was apprehended a short time after, by Superintendent Brown, but the watch has not been recovered. The prisoner pleaded not guilty, and was committed for trial at the Quarter Sessions.		The Cambridge Independent Press , 16 October 1869, 7
