1846		Oxford, OXF	in gaol	The neighbourhoods of Woodstock, Sturdy's Castle, and Jackley [sic - Tackley], have been thrown into a considerable state of alarm in consequence of the discovery of the skeletons of three human beings, in a pit on the right hand side of the Banbury turnpike-road, and within fifty yards of the Sturdy's Castle public-house, and which there is every reason to fear are the remains of some unfortunate fellow-creatures who have been basely murdered and then buried there by a gang of gipsies who used to infest that part of Oxfordshire, three of whom are now in Oxford Castle, two under a conviction of murder, and the other of sheep-stealing. Our readers will at once know to whom we allude, viz., to James Biddle and Isaac Sherriff, who were condemned at the recent assizes for the murder of Mr. Mobbs, but whose sentence has since been commuted to that of transportation for life, and Skerry, who turned Queen's evidence, but was afterwards transported for fifteen years for sheep-stealing. The discovery of the human skeletons arose under the following circumstances : - When Mr. Walker, the governor of Banbury Gaol, and Morgan, the constable of Kings Sutton, were bringing Biddle, Skerry, and Sherriff to Oxford Castle, and on arriving within a short distance of the public-house called Sturdy's Castle, Biddle suddenly exclaimed (pointing to the side of the road as well as his handcuffs would let him), "There lays dead men's bones." Mr. Walker asked what he meant - how dead men's bones came there? Biddle appeared somewhat confused, but replied, in a jesting manner, "Oh, they were killed in the war," and said no more. The officers, on their return from Oxford, repeated the conversation to the landlady at Sturdy's Castle, who remembered that about eight years ago, a person disappeared from that neighbourhood under very peculiar circumstances, and had never been seen or heard of by his friends since - the person's name was Hicks, the son of a small farmer residing at Jackley [sic], a village about a mile and a half from Sturdy's Castle, and that he was the owner of some cottages and land at that place. He was a very eccentric character, and preferred a roaming life to a settled one. He at last took up a regular vagabond's life, wandering about the country with a gipsy tribe, of which Biddle and Skerry formed a portion. Every half-year they were to be seen encamped in the neighbourhood of Sturdy's Castle, and it was on these occasions only Hicks used to pay his native village a visit, for the purpose of receiving his rents for the lands and cottages. Something like eight years ago he paid his half-yearly visit as usual, but since that time he has never been seen or heard of, and his brother has taken to the property. The circumstances under which he disappeared, and the company he was known to keep, coupled with Biddle's declaration on his way to Oxford Castle, led to the opinion that he had been basely murdered for the sake of the rents he had been receiving. No steps were taken to ascertain the truth of Biddle's declaration until Friday week, when some persons were employed to dig about the spot pointed to by Biddle, when, horrible to relate, the skeletons of three human beings were discovered in a hollow place, which was many years ago used as a saw-pit, on the side of the road, about a foot and a half under ground. Many of the bones are quite perfect. A medical gentleman residing in the neighbourhood has pronounced them to be those of a woman and two men, and from the state they were in they must have been there several years. They were carefully collected together and placed in a box, which is now under lock and seal, waiting the issue of a coroner's inquest, when, it is to be hoped, that some further light will be thrown on the affair.	The Derby Mercury , 19 August 1846, 4

It seems that Mr. Sibry accidentally called at the George and Dragon, at Rough Close, on the 12th instant, in which the prisoner, and others were regaling themselves. They left the house shortly after he entered, taking with them Mr. Sibry's umbrella. 1876	mid-August	Chipping Campden, GLS	in magistrates court	Daniel Smith and William Biddle, two travelling razor grinders, were charged with stealing, at Saintbury, on the 27th of July last, a copper furnace, of the value of 4l., the property of the Rev. C.W. Simons, Rector of Saintbury. From the evidence it appeared that information was given on the robbery to Supt. M'Rae, of Campden, whose suspicion at once fell on the prisoners, they having called at the Rectory in the morning in search of grinding, and the furnace being at the back door, where it was used for storing water. He dispatched officers to Stratford and Evesham, and made a local search himself without success. From further inquiry on the 5th inst. he found that the prisoners had been seen at Stratford; he went there and got on their track, after a deal	Jackson's Oxford Journal , 19 August 1876, 8 of trouble, and traced them then to Wellesbourne, where he found that the stolen furnace had been sold to John Spicer, marine store dealer; he received the furnace from Spicer (and also another stolen by prisoners from Dumbleton, and since identified); followed them to Shipston, and from thence to Radway, in Warwickshire, where he apprehended them, after travelling 200 miles. The prisoners said that they found the copper in a ditch, and thought it no harm to sell what they found. Great praise is due to Supt. M'Rae for his tact and zeal in this case. The prisoners were committed for trial at the ensuing Quarter Sessions.
