| 1869 | 11 September           | Oxford, OXF | charged with theft               |   | The Abingdon Herald , 20 September 1869, 2          |
| 1869 | 18 September           | Oxford, OXF | in magistrates court             | Donnelly , who a few weeks ago, was imprisoned for drunken and riotous conduct, was charged with stealing from the pocket of James Roberts, a navy on the Great Western Railway, near Banbury, the sum of 3s. 4d., on the 11th instant. - Prosecutor said he was a native of Cardiff. On Saturday night, the 11th instant, he went into the Windsor Castle, High-street, St. Thomas', and called for a pint of beer. After paying for the beer he had half-a-crown, a sixpence, and some coppers, an old Irish half of a halfpenny, and a button in his pocket. Having worked hard that day he laid down on the bench, and went to sleep. He was awoke by a policeman, when he found his pocket turned inside out, and the money gone. He would swear to the old Irish half of a halfpenny produced, for he had had it in his pocket two months. - Mrs. Jane Lindsay, landlady of the Windsor Castle, said that on Saturday last prisoner came to her house, and paid for a night's lodging. Some time after she saw him standing at the front door, and shortly missing him from there, she went down the passage and looked into the window, where she saw him draw his hand from the prosecutor's pocket, who was then lying on the seat asleep, in the tap-room. She tapped at the window with her hand, and he came out, when she asked him what he was doing to the man. He answered nothing, and she told him he must have been doing something, and the sooner he was out of her house the better. She gave him back the money he paid for his lodgings, and he left. - By prisoner : There was a soldier in the house, but he left before she saw him at prosecutor's pocket. - By the Clerk : She did not give the prisoner the old Irish coin. - Mrs. Rebecca Lane, landlady of the Light Horse Inn, Castle-street, said that about ten minutes to twelve on the evening in question, prisoner came to her house and asked if she could spare him a bed, which she after a time arranged to do. He paid her three penny-pieces and two halfpennies. After prisoner had gone upstairs a policeman came in, and asked if she had taken in a man. She answered in the affirmative, and he went upstairs and brought the prisoner down. On looking in her till she found the coin produced, which she believed she must have taken from the prisoner, but did not notice it at the time. She gave it to the constable. - P.C. Hamlet deposed to being on duty in St. Thomas' on the evening in question, when the landlord of the Windsor Castle came to him, and said a man at his house had been robbed. He went to the Light Horse and took prisoner into custody. On charging him with the theft he said he knew nothing about it. Witness searched him in the presence of the Superintendent, and found a half-crown, a sixpence, and 6½d. in coppers upon him. - Prisoner, in answer to the charge, pleaded not guilty. He could prove that he had the half-crown from Mrs. Warwick, Abingdon. He had been to Abingdon races, and came to Oxford on Saturday with 7s. in his pocket. - The prosecutor said the money found on the prisoner, was within a few coppers, the same as he had described. - The Mayor, in addressing the prisoner, said the Bench were quite satisfied that he had taken the money, and it appeared to them that he was a professional pick pocket. A poor hard-working man having gone into a public-house, he had watched his opportunity when he was asleep, and rifled his pockets. He would be sentenced to two months' imprisonment with hard labour. | The Abingdon Herald , 20 September 1869, 2          |

| 1882 | 4 October              | Oxford, OXF | in magistrates court             | John Donnelly , hawker, lodging at the Three Horse Shoes, Castle-street, was charged with fraudulently obtaining the sum of 4½d. from Charles Grantham, No. 2, Castle-street, by means of ringing the changes, at 6 p.m. on Monday. Prisoner was further charged with being drunk at the same time. - Pleaded not guilty. - Prosecutor said that he managed the business of Messers. Pash and Co., of Castle-street. The prisoner came to the shop on Monday, and asked for a pair of laces, for which he charged him 1½d. Prisoner gave him 6d. to pay for them, and witness gave him 4½d. change. Prisoner looked at the change, and said "All halfpence! I have change if you will give me back the 6d. Witness gave him the 6d. back, and the prisoner put it with the 4½d. he had given him before, and said "Give me a shilling for it, as the change may be useful to you." Witness got cross with him, and said, "Give me the money for the laces," and the prisoner gave him 1½d., and walked out. Directly he had gone, witness thought he had been "done," and followed the prisoner, whom he saw with two other men. Witness went to a constable, and the prisoner was given in charge. On the road to the station he offered him the 4½d., and tried to put it in his pocket, but witness refused to accept it. - Prisoner said he discovered there was a mistake when he got outside, and, therefore, he offered the 4½d. to the prosecutor. - P.C. Winchester said that the prisoner was given into his custody, and then tried to return the 4½d. to the prosecutor, who refused to take it. Just before this, witness saw a man named Hollis give the prisoner three pennies, and two or three minutes previously the prisoner had handed something to Hollis, but he did not know what it was. When at the station witness searched Donnelly, and found on him eight brass rings, 6½d. in coppers, two dice, and some conjuring tickets. - The Mayor observed that the rings and tickets were implements of trickery. - Superintendent Head said the man had been three times before the Bench. - Prisoner hoped he would be dealt leniently with, because he was not very well. - He was sent to gaol for one month, with hard labour.  | The Abingdon and Reading Herald , 7 October 1882, 6 |
